respondents from Manur, Alangulam and Papakudi village of Tirunelveli district, Tamil Nadu. Analysis shows that when the respondents have more engagement in household activities, the extent of social abuse becomes less. Household engagement such as washing, cooking, shopping etc. is greater among the female elderly. Social engagement such as visiting friends, taking part in formal occasions, public meetings etc. are greater among the male elderly. It is found that if there is the greater level of engagement in social activities, the experience of psychological abuse, neglect, social abuse and the overall elderly abuse become less. Women elderly have less education and less income, they are more likely to live in widowhood for longer period, they have less engagement in social activities and are mostly confined to household activities. While abuse is there among the aged people, it exists in a greater degree among the women.

Reconciliation with Family Members in Old Age

Dr. Pramila Nagavanghi, Assistant professor-sociology, Chandrapal Dadasena College of the College, Pithora, District-Mahasamund (Chhattisgarh), Email: ptsraipurmana@gmail.com

Dr. Anita Rajpuria, Professor-Sociology, B.C.S. Govt. College, Dhamtari (Chhattisgarh)

During the period of rapid change, the situation of the elderly has also changed due to the changes in the structure and functions of the family, which is the reason why there is no successful adjustment between the elderly and the family members. The old store of experience is still keeping the transfer of culture and rituals, social customs, traditions and life values to the new generation, which can provide a new life to the new generation so that the disintegrated families can reorganize.

Objectives of the paper are 1) to find out the status of harmony with family members and 2) to find out the state of harmony with the society.

Methodology: Out of 167 villages of Arang development block, 04 villages Rastni, Paragaon, Pahanda and Gukhera have been selected through objective design method. The facts have been compiled from the interview schedule, observation method and secondary sources. The findings are as follows. In old age, there is a need to make the elderly more harmonious. Safety and care are needed more than other members. In old age, the responsibility of their security on the family members of the elderly increases. In this case, the elders should reconcile with their children because harmony will create less tension in the family.

Retirement Planning and Psycho-Social Aspects of Aging: A Combo Pack

Dr. Manushi Srivastava, Associate Professor (Medical Sociology), Department of Community Medicine, Institute of Medical Sciences, BHU-Varanasi, Email: manushi.bhu@gmail.com

Retirement is considered as both a major life event and a lengthy, multidimensional life stage, the adjustment to which is influenced by a number of factors. Uncertainty, lack of preparedness, and unrealistic expectations can create problems during the retirement transition (Gall & Evans, 2000). Retirement is viewed as a period of crisis and adjustment, so planning for it becomes necessary before the time of retirement to make the life happy and without compromise in future. Retirement planning is the planning which an individual does to be prepared for post-retirement life, not just formal i.e. financial but in all aspects of life including Non-financial planning. The non-financial planning includes lifestyle choices about how to spend time in post-retirement, where to live, with whom to live, when to quit working, etc.

On the other hand, "Aging is a lifelong process... it starts with birth and ends with death". According to global censuses, the aging population is increasing day by day representing 11% of the world population with the rate of
